1. Around early October 1951, headquarters of the 15 Army Group (AG) received orders from 4 Field Army headquarters to send six infantry battalions of the 15 AG from Kwangtung to Hankow, from where they were to move soon to North China. As a result, between 13 and 17 October one battalion of each of the following units was sent from the Canton area to Hankow: The 362, 369, 381, 382, 392, and 396 Regiments.

2. On 21 and 22 October, the 128 Division, 43 Army, and 138 Division, 46 Army, arrived in Peiping on the Peiping-Hankow railroad and were immediately sent north on the Peiping-Mukden railroad.

From 20 to 27 October, 30,000 Chinese Communist Army recruits, most of whom were from areas south of the Yangtze River, arrived in Peiping on the Peiping-Hankow and Peiping-Pukow railroads. As of late October they were all in the Peiping area but were soon to be sent to Korea via Manchuria as replacements for Chinese Communists units in Korea.

4. During October troops of public security divisions were being transferred to field armies, and citizen soldiers were being organized into the depleted public security divisions. This system was to save time in training replacements for field armies scheduled to return to Korea.

1. [REDACTED] Comment. Presumably militia.
